Radio Cough Causes Battle Over Pay Rate

NEW YORK—The act of coughing has become a labor problem and a test of dramatic art. Instead of being merely a nuisance in the theater and concert hall, it suddenly acquired a market value—from $6 to $12.50 per well-modulated bark.

The elevation of coughing to the status of a paying profession was the result of a ruling by the American Federation of Radio Artists, the AFL group that covers all performers on the air. Specifically, the union decreed that a staff radio announcer was no longer just a staff radio announcer if he had to cough on cue.

Result of Promotion

The determination of the importance of coughing came as the result of a promotional scheme planned by station WMCA.

After thorough exploration of all the possibilities, WMCA chose the device of a one-minute transcription to be played at intervals for two days before the program of tuberculosis control went on the air. It was learned that the announcer would proclaim the need everyone has for air. Then he would inhale, exhale and, as a climax, cough. This would be followed by announcement of the tuberculosis program.

Upon making a routine check-up at the actors' union, however, WMCA learned it had a dilemma. There was a contract with many provisions. The provisions were very specific that a staff announcer should not try any extra dramatic embellishments in the course of making spot announcements. He shall read what was before him and that was all.

Had Enough

WMCA decided it had enough. The union scale for actors on spot announcements begins somewhere between $6 and $12.50, a station official noted. He decided that even for a cough by a "name" cougher, that price was too steep.

Union officials somewhat reluctantly acknowledged that they had interposed objections to the coughing announcements. They explained that the criterion was not a cough or two but the matter of establishing a precedent which might lead to extensive extra-curricular activities by staff announcers without additional pay for their added efforts.

Atomic Clock Can Split Seconds With Accuracy

WASHINGTON—An atomic clock that can split seconds with the extraordinary accuracy of one part in 20,000,000 has been added to the arsenal of research science.

The national bureau of standards developed it and scientists said it was a great improvement over the observatory method of telling time by the stars which had previously been the last word in accuracy.

Dr. E. U. Condon, director of the bureau, said the instrument provided an entirely new and amazingly precise method of measuring not only time but also frequency. He said it should prove an invaluable tool" for research in medicine, chemistry, physics, engineering and electronics.

The bureau said the clock "is already being improved." Its potential accuracy is theoretically one part in 10,000,000,000. At that rate, it would take about 3,000,000 years for the clock to gain or lose a second.

The face of the clock looks like just what it is—a large, conventional electric clock.

What makes it different is an atomic attachment that acts as a regulating "governor" for the electric works.

This attachment consists of a thirty-foot copper tube filled with ammonia gas, a quartz crystal oscillator, and certain electronic instruments known as frequency multipliers, dividers and discriminators.

The oscillator puts out a radio signal which by itself is extremely consistent in frequency. In fact, until today, a simple quartz crystal attachment was the most accurate governor available for time-frequency measurements.

Britain Would Recruit 50 American Scientists

LONDON.—Fifty American scientists are to be recruited by Britain's Colonial Geological survey and the Colonial Geodetic and Topographical survey to fill the gaps in personnel created during the war years, according to the colonial office.

The project, under which the scientists would be concentrated in East Africa, where large railway developments are proposed, the colonial office says, is under consideration by the E.C.A. in Washington. The colonial office has asked E.C.A. whether the American scientists and technicians can fill the posts "while recruitment catches up."

It has been suggested that their basic salaries be met by European recovery program funds while their local allowances be paid in sterling.

New 'Cow Bomb' Used In Spraying Animals

Dry DDT Crystals Now Practical for Spray

A new animal disinfectant device called the "isocomist cow bomb," is now available for use on livestock.

The cow bomb is used to apply a deposit of dry DDT crystals to the hair and hide of livestock for protection against the horn fly, house fly, stable fly, cattle lice, ticks, mosquitoes and certain other insects.

Dry DDT goes into suspension in water less readily than any other form and withstands rain more desirably. It contains no oil to cause burning or to help DDT penetrate the hide. The DDT particles are microscopic in size and thus a given amount covers a greater area than other forms. It is said one isomist cow bomb will treat approximately 100 cattle with the recommended 30 second treatment. It provides protection for cattle on pasture for about three weeks under average conditions. To help prevent lice infestation, prophylactic treatment of all additions to the herd is recommended.

The isomist cow bomb can be used on dairy and beef cattle, hogs, horses and sheep.

The procedure recommended for cows is to cover the body of the animal with paint sprayer motions at from 12 to 18-inch distances; for legs only 6-8 inches. Total time per cow is about 30 seconds.

London Plans to Do Away With Street Fire Alarms

LONDON. — Since boys will be boys and pull street corner fire alarms just for the fun of it, London is going to do away with them, it was announced by the leader of the London county council, I. J. Hayward. Fire calls like those for police and ambulance will be made instead by any telephone.

"It was a shocking thing," Hayward said in a press conference, "that from March 1 to Dec. 31 of last year more than 75 per cent of all fire calls given by fire alarms should have been false."

False alarms over the telephone, he added, are less than a fifth of those from street alarms.

Removal of the street alarms will be gradual and will be accompanied by an increase in street telephone booths.

Bass Fiddle Player Ends Door-Passage Problems

NEWARK, N. J. — Peter Rugiero, 30, a professional bass fiddle player, has been wrestling for years with the problem of how to carry his instrument through revolving doors.

He came up with the solution, a hull fiddle that shrinks. He worked two and a half years to perfect his invention.

The collapsible fiddle divides into three parts and is made of plywood. The sections fit together with the fingerboard inside. Everything goes into a case about the size of that used for a saxophone.

"Experts who have heard it play," Ruggiero said, "tell me it sounds just the same as the stand and kind of bass fiddle."

'Bronx Cheers' on Phone Bring Woman Into Court

PROVIDENCE. — A superior court judge listed for Mrs. Eva Parness four neighbors she must never call up again—because the neighbors said that for six years Mrs. Parness had forced on them "torture by telephone."

Judge Walter Curry explained Mrs. Parness from "any telephone calls whatsoever"—under pain of "drastic punishment" — to Mrs. Frank Kaplan, Abraham Kaplan, Mrs. Freda Roiff, and Samuel Roiff.

Mrs. Kaplan testified she started getting the phone calls after once "butting into an argument" between Mrs. Parness and her sister-in-law.

All four testified that several times a day their phone would ring and they would hear "curses, epithets, and Bronx cheers."

Wayne University Records Lessons For Use by Blind

DETROIT.—In a cramped little room Donald Jenks, a Wayne university freshman, sits down before a recording machine and begins to read from a textbook.

At first he is hesitant, but soon, following instructions from assistant librarian Ted Manheim, he is reading with confidence. His voice is grooved into a seven inch plastic disk revolving before him.

Jenks is one of about 80 volunteers helping out in Wayne's program of recording textbooks for blind students.

A few days later his record is spinning on a turntable in the room of Alfred Platz, a blind senior studying history. Platz listens and occasionally takes notes on a Braille slate. The strange voice of an unknown fellow student is reading his next day's assignment to him.

Besides Platz are other records with other unknown voices. Each one contains 14 minutes of reading on each side. No longer does the blind student have to adjust his studies to times when he can make an appointment with a reader. Everything is on the records beside him to use as he sees fit.

Procedure Outlined

This, in brief, is how Wayne's textbook recording program works. The records have suddenly given six blind students at the university a whole new approach to their studies.

To make all this possible the volunteer readers work tirelessly in the university's only available space, a virtual closet adjoining the library reading room. Every day several students give their time so that their voices will bring knowledge to the few who cannot see.

So far more than 2,200 pages have been grooved on 175 disks. Blind students all have portable "talking book" record players loaned by the government and they need no extra equipment to take advantage of the project.

"We are able to record almost everything that's asked for by the blind students," says Dr. G. Flint Purdy, chief librarian.

Dr. Purdy envisions a whole library of recorded textbooks.

"We're trying to look way ahead," he says. "We're hoping to build up a collection of elementary texts that can be used over and over."

Students Enthusiastic

Platz expresses the blind students' enthusiasm when he says:

"It's much easier to study this way. I don't have to take so many notes when I can play the records over and over."

The university has three recording machines, two on loan from the county library. Records cost 11 cents apiece and the university foots all the costs.

Manheim, who spends almost all his time supervising the program, plans to have Braille inscriptions marked in the center of disks to enable listeners to identify them easily.

Librarian Purdy is interested in seeing whether the project will encourage more blind students to undertake college work. He says he knows of no other school carrying on a similar project.

"Students come back glowing with delight after using the records," he says. "If the program helps one intelligent blind student who would not otherwise make the grade get through school, then it will be worth while."

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR MRS. BROWN

Mrs. Hugh Waverly Brown and Mrs. William Richey Jobe were hostesses at a surprise birthday dinner Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Robert Lee Brown. Mrs. Brown was presented many attractive and useful gifts. Besides the honoree and hostesses, those present were R. L. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Akers, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Brown, Donna Lea and Charles Wayne Brown, Horace Jobe, Miss Eubella Spencer, W. R. Jobe, Billy and Kenneth Jobe, H. W. Brown, Danny and Dennis Brown. Later in the evening a large birthday cake was cut and served with ice cream, Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Irving, Sara and Buddy Irving and Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Brown joined the party at this time.
